CHOOSING A GIFT

A true gift should be chosen for the recipient's benefit, not the caregiver's convenience.

Consider these 3 things when choosing a gift:

1. Interests: Think about your partner's hobbies, past roles, favorite activities, and things that bring them joy.

2. Desire for Independence: Consider areas where your partner experiences challenges and wants support, such as cooking, gardening, getting dressed, or caring for a pet. Make sure the gift is something they want and won't perceive as an insult.

3. Abilities: Consider your partner's current cognitive and physical abilities to ensure they can use and enjoy the gift safely and successfully.

Keep Dignity and Safety in Mind

- Packaging: Avoid labels that reference young children, age limits, or dementia if they could feel stigmatizing for your partner. Consider covering or removing the packaging.

- Safety: Watch for small pieces and choking hazards, especially if your partner tends to put objects in their mouth.
